don't make me think, revisited - pearsoncmg - wrote the first edition of don't make me think back in 2000. by 2002, i began to get a few emails a year from readers asking (very politely) if i'd thought about updating it. not complaining; just trying to be helpful. "a lot of the examples are out of date" was the usual comment. 10 usability lessons from steve krug's don't make me think ... - usability, i've re-read steve krug's don't make me think and pulled out what i consider to be the most insightful and best thoughts in this book. i highly recommend picking up a copy if you get a chance, but here are some things don't make me think - acstu - krug invariably answers, "don't make me think!" he explains that websites need to be self-evident, obvious, and self-explanatory. through effective design, they need to tell users what the site has to offer, where to start, and how to find what they're looking for. krug points out several common design errors that make users "think". don't make me think, second edition: a common sense ... - chapter 10 [164] things that diminish goodwill here are a few of the things that tend to make users feel like the people publishing a site don't have their best interests at heart: steve krug, don't make me think - 2lvw - steve krug, don't make me think chapter 1 web pages should be self-explanatory, simple. the user should have no questions about if something is what they are looking for (clever names, etc.) or if something is clickable. don't make me think a common sense approach to web usability - dont make me think a steve krug, author of don't make me think! a common sense approach to web usability, provides consulting services including expert usability reviews and usability testing workshops. advanced common sense - steve krug's web site i don't think we owe college to our kids. does that make me a bad father?
